

Thomas M. Turzak

Tom Turzak '65 is president and chief executive officer of Daner International, a management consulting firm, with offices in Chicago, Washington D.C., Bangkok, Hong Kong, Kiev, and Moscow. Tom recently retired from a 35-year career in the manufacturing and service industries where he held positions as president and chief executive officer along with serving on a number of boards of directors.

Turzak is a graduate of Texas A&M University with bachelors' degrees in chemical engineering and industrial engineering in 1965. He completed the executive MBA program at Rice University in 1990.

He has significant experience in general management and has participated in a number of start-ups and turnarounds, with expertise in engineering, construction, sales and marketing, strategic planning, domestic and international project development, economic studies, and computer studies. Emphasis in the past ten years has been in the newly independent states of the former Soviet Union, Asia Pacific, China, Latin America and Eastern Europe. He has managed and participated in large projects in the electronics manufacturing, automotive, high-rise buildings, pharmaceutical, food, refining petrochemical, chemical and manufacturing industries.