Each fall and spring, Public Partnership and Outreach at Texas A&M University offers intercultural communication seminars and workshops. Once every 4-5 years, we offer a Community-wide opportunity to attend a Community of Respect Train-the-Trainer seminar. This seminar certifies current or aspiring trainers to deliver training to others using Community of Respect materials. We invite you to consider this award-winning intercultural communication training program, designed especially for people who want to become more culturally competent in how they engage with others and those seeking professional development skills that can be applied in the workplace.

Program Features: Training manual, a textbook, a host of training supplements on a flash drive to print or use electronically, assessment materials, personal consultations with trainers, a trainer certificate from IACET (International Association of Continuing Education and Training), and breakfast, lunch and snacks on both days.

If you wish to be added to a waitlist after registration has closed or if you need additional information, please email Gracie Lara at glara@tamu.edu.

Cancellation Policy:
For a full refund, cancellations for any seminar or workshop must be made 10 workdays in advance. For those who must cancel after the deadline, a substitute participant will be permitted.
